Umi and Abah welcome Abah's independent and progressive younger sibling, who has returned from Dubai to work at Ahlan Tour, a company owned by Abah and Aseng. Their arrival brings significant changes, both at work and within the family, especially with their controversial hobby, pole dancing. When the extended family learns about this, the pressure to change their lifestyle creates tension at home between Jamila, Abah, and Umi.

At work, a love triangle involving Aseng, Burhan, and Said further complicates matters. Aseng, who was captivated by Jamila at first sight, strives to win her heart but is met with harsh reality. Struggling with heartbreak, Aseng watches as Jamila begins to develop feelings for someone new. As the conflict escalates, the family must confront a dilemma: whether to uphold tradition or embrace the modernity that Jamila brings.
